'Tragic beyond belief'

A spokesperson from U-Haul said employees found the remains in a storage locker on Monday afternoon. JOHN WOODS/THE CANADIAN PRESS

'Disturbing discovery.'
Police remaining tight-lipped after remains of as many as four babies found in northwest Winnipeg storage locker

Police say the discovery of as many as four dead infants in a U-Haul storage locker is "tragic beyond belief," but it was not yet clear Tuesday if the deaths were homicides.

Const. Eric Hofley said concerned employees at the storage locker company in northwest Winnipeg called police Monday afternoon. Once inside, he said, officers found what appeared to be the remains of the babies.

"It was the state of the remains that drew the attention of the employees," Hofley told a news conference. "The remains were in a state such as it's not obvious yet exactly whether we are dealing with four separate remains or three. That will be determined at autopsy."

It's not clear how the infants died, how old they were or even if they were full term, Hofley said. But the victims appeared to be "very, very young" and could be newborns.

"This incident (is) tragic beyond belief and leaves many questions unanswered at this time," said Const. Eric Hofley. SHANE GIBSON/METRO

Police were talking to a few people, but the remains don't appear to be linked to any infants that have been reported missing, Hofley added. "It's suspicious. Until autopsies have been completed, whether it is found that someone has deliberately caused the death of one or all of these infants, that remains to be seen. It's just too early in the investigation to say exactly what's transpired here."

The U-Haul storage locker facility, which was cordoned off by police tape, was cleared Tuesday. Employees who were on the site declined to comment to reporters and directed inquiries to police.

Razmin Mansoub, president of U-Haul Company of Central Canada, said the remains were found by employees.

"U-Haul team members made a disturbing discovery when taking inventory of a delinquent storage locker on Monday," Mansoub said in an emailed statement. "They immediately contacted law enforcement who believed the locker contained human remains."

"U-Haul is deeply shocked and saddened by this discovery."

Police are remaining tight-lipped for now because they don't want to do anything to jeopardize an investigation that is not yet 24 hours old, Hofley said. More information is expected Wednesday.

Elevator pitch: In the candidates' own words

It's election day!

We've got you covered; here is a brief pitch from each mayoral candidate on why you should vote for them

winnipeg@metronews.ca

On the final day of campaigning, candidates crisscrossed the city making their final pitch to voters. Here, in their own words, are why each of the mayoral contenders thinks he or she should get your vote today.

1. Michel Fillion:

During my campaign, I have not promised you "golden sidewalks" like my competitors, as if we live in the world of Oz. But, I can promise you nice smooth concrete ones, in direct relation to the smooth roads you'll be getting.

2. Paula Havixbeck:

I've been the underdog throughout the campaign, but I've been a fighter for citizens. I've held true in putting forward policy platforms that are futuristic, but realistic having competent people as a resource. I don't have all the answers but I know where to find them.

3. David Sanders:

A vote for me is a vote

David Sanders makes his final campaign announcement on Tuesday in front of city hall. COLIN FAST/FOR METRO for actual change, someone who can clean up city hall in a hurry, and someone who does have a vision for how things can be better and who knows how to go about doing it. I have the track record that none of the other candidates have.

4. Gord Steeves:

I believe we're voting on whether we're building bus rapid transit. If we're building BRT, then we're going to have to raise taxes a lot. That's the ballot box question. My platform is the most realistic, the most affordable, and it helps everyday Winnipeggers.

Head to the polls

The polls are open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. According to election officials, we will know by 9:15 p.m. who our new mayor, councillors and school trustees are.

Watch metronews.ca/winnipeg for all the details as they happen, and read tomorrow's print edition for all the results.

5. Robert-Falcon Ouellette:

Our ideas have shaped the campaign: living in a divided city, disclosing donors to campaigns, rail relocation. Had I not run for mayor, these ideas would not have been debated, and if I'm elected, we can actually start to tackle them.

6. Judy Wasylycia-Leis:

City hall has failed us. Backroom deals and cost overruns have set our city back. We can get on the right track but being mayor is not an entry-level job. I have the experience and a practical plan to build a city that works.

7. Brian Bowman:

We know voters want change. As Winnipeggers go to the polls, they have a clear choice between a politician who has been around for decades or an experienced leader with a clear vision and solid plan to move Winnipeg forward.

Judy Wasylycia-Leis

Infrastructure

Would invest another $60 million into roads, on top of $340 million already approved by the city, for a total of $400 million over four years. Would redirect $20 million out of that $400 million to active transportation projects.

Rapid transit

Would complete the second phase of rapid transit.

Taxes

Proposing an increase of about three per cent per year over the next four years. Would freeze business tax at 5.7 per cent for next four years.

Accountability

Would make mayor's calendar available. Would provide full online disclosure of expenses. Would create Accountability Winnipeg, a new office to conduct value-for-money audits, oversee new lobbyist registry and administer code of ethics.

Robert-Falcon Ouellette

Infrastructure

Would create fully funded $250-million infrastructure fund for roads, bridges, water and waste. Fund would be financed with $12 million a year from proposed Land Value Tax to leverage $250 million more. Would improve snow removal, create Pothole Rapid Response Team.

Rapid transit

Would cancel second phase of BRT and implement lower-cost metrobus system. Would provide $1.5 million for feasibility study on moving CPR railyards out of city, then develop plan for light rail on existing, vacated rail network.

Taxes

Would raise property or business taxes only "as a last resort" and limit it to yearly rate of inflation

Accountability

Would post spending, contracts and tenders over $1,000 and property data online. Make mandatory, real-time disclosure of donors a requirement for civic campaigns. Would compile and release an annual list of contracts awarded to campaign donors.

Brian Bowman

Infrastructure

Would invest an additional $10 million each year over next four years into city's infrastructure budget. Would lobby province for a "fairer share" of the PST.

Rapid transit

Would complete all six legs of rapid transit by 2030, including second phase linking downtown leg to University of Manitoba.

Taxes

Would begin discussions about a municipal sales tax that would replace property taxes. Would reduce the current 5.7 per cent business tax on an annual basis to account for increases in annual rental rates. Would increase small business tax credit to $30,000 from $23,880

Accountability

Would create Office of Public Engagement to ensure "consistency and transparency" of information on all city projects. Would make council votes easily accessible. Would provide monthly online detailed publication of all discretionary budgets used by council.

Gord Steeves

Infrastructure

Create a $200-million fund for upfront infrastructure spending, with $100 million coming from the sale of four city-owned golf courses, $50 million from the sale of the tower and parkade portion of new police headquarters, and the rest from hiring freeze and limits to purchasing goods and services. Would look for more cash for infrastructure through the use of tax incremental financing of redeveloped golf course land.

Rapid transit

Would cancel second phase of BRT project, saving the city $225 million.

Taxes

Would freeze property taxes for the next four years.

Accountability

Would create a treasury board to monitor all expenditures greater than $100,000. Would restore the executive policy committee secretariat.

Nasty campaign flyer not mine, says Hildebrandt

St. Charles council candidate Dwight Hildebrandt has denied that his campaign is behind a nasty flyer that showed up in area mailboxes on Monday.

The photocopied leaflet makes several negative statements about current councillor Grant Nordman and candidates Shawn Dobson and Eric Holland. It also implores voters to support Hildebrandt.

"These flyers were published without my authorization and are a clear violation of the Elections Act. City and election officials have already been notified of the incident and will be investigating accordingly," Hildebrandt said in a statement.

"The information and statements made in the flyer do not reflect my personal thoughts or represent the thoughts of myself or my campaign team."

Attack on soldiers in Quebec linked to terror ideology: Public safety minister

Saint-Jean-sur-Richelieu. RCMP confirm Martin Couture-Rouleau was on a list of 90 suspected extremists Police say Martin Couture-Rouleau drove a car deliberately into two soldiers, killing one of them.

Public Safety Minister Steven Blaney said Tuesday that Canada is taking terrorist threats seriously, adding he was "horrified and saddened" by Monday's incident in Saint-Jean-sur-Richelieu, Que.

"What took place yesterday is clearly linked to terrorist ideology," he told a news conference in the town southeast of Montreal that is home to a military college and a garison.

"It is an unacceptable act of violence against our country, our Quebec values, our Canadian values."

Quebec provincial police announced the soldier's death Tuesday morning and later identified him as Patrice Vincent.

cent, a 53-year-old warrant officer. No other details about Vincent were released in the police tweet.

In the Commons, however, Prime Minister Stephen Harper praised Vincent as a 28-year veteran who served with distinction across the country.

"This was a despicable act of violence that strikes against not just this soldier and his colleagues, but frankly against our very values as a civilized democracy," Harper said.

Provincial police described the second soldier's injuries as less serious and said his life was not in danger.

Lt. Guy Lapointe told a separate news conference Tuesday that the act was deliberate and that one of the two soldiers was in uniform.

Also on Tuesday, RCMP Commissioner Bob Paulson confirmed the man was one of 90 suspected extremists the RCMP believed were intending to join fights abroad or who have returned to Canada.

"That's what follows from the analysis; his passport was seized by us ...

"He was part of our investigative efforts to try and identify those people who might commit a criminal act travelling abroad for terrorist purposes. In that respect, we were working him and other suspects, and we need to let the investigation now proceed, and pursue and satisfy everyone."

He said he does not suspect

Couture-Rouleau had co-conspirators.

On Monday, Lapointe said the shooting occurred after Couture-Rouleau hit the two pedestrians in the parking lot of a shopping mall and took off.

That triggered a chase that ended with Couture-Rouleau losing control and his car rolling over several times.

Lapointe said Couture-Rouleau was brandishing a knife when he emerged from the vehicle. THE CANADIAN PRESS

'Senseless act'

Defense minister pays tribute to Patrice Vincent

Federal Defence Minister Rob Nicholson paid tribute Tuesday to the soldier killed in Quebec on Monday.

Nicholson spoke at the Cold Lake military base in Alberta after six Canadian fighter jets left to join an international combat mission against Islamic State of Iraq and al-Sham extremists.

Nicholson said members of the military represent Canada's best, and to have one die in such a "senseless act" only strengthens the resolve of the troops.

The CF-18 Hornets that took off from Alberta are heading to Kuwait, which will serve as Canada's base of operations in the combat mission. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Muzzled scientists

Foreign scientists sign open letter decrying Harper's funding cuts

More than 800 scientists from around the world have signed an open letter to Prime Minister Stephen Harper decrying what they call a rapid decline in funding and freedoms faced by Canadian government scientists.

"Earth to Canada: Science Needs You," says the headline over the letter that was published as an ad in the Ottawa Citizen newspaper. They say complex environmental and public health problems require the full participation of scientists from all over the world, but Canadian scientists are missing in action due to budget cuts and constraints on their freedom to travel, communicate and collaborate.

The federal information commissioner is investigating the way government communication rules limit public access to publicly funded scientific information. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Women's rights

MPs vote to make Malala Yousafzai honorary citizen

The House of Commons has unanimously supported bestowing honorary Canadian citizenship upon Pakistani teenager Malala Yousafzai, co-winner of this year's Nobel Peace Prize.

The honour comes on the eve of Yousafzai's visit to Canada to participate in an event on women's rights in Toronto. Prime Minister Stephen Harper says she's being made an honorary Canadian in recognition of her bravery in her fight for the rights of women and girls to go to school.

Yousafzai was the target of Taliban assassins after she became an outspoken advocate for her right to attend class and she's since gone on to become an international spokesperson on the issue.

While there's no official procedure involved in granting honorary citizenship, precedent has been for the House of Commons and Senate to approve a motion. THE CANADIAN PRESS

British reporter who interviewed Magnotta in 2011 testifies at trial

Jurors at Luka Rocco Magnotta's murder trial heard testimony Wednesday from an English journalist who met the accused less than six months before Jun Lin's slaying.

Alex West is a reporter for the Sun newspaper in London who interviewed Magnotta in December 2011 at a hotel above a pub in Wembley over allegations the accused posted videos of cat killings.

A recording of the roughly 30-minute exchange between Magnotta and West, recorded secretly by the journalist, was heard in court Wednesday.

West's testimony, given from the Canadian High Commission in London, is key as the Crown set outs to prove that Magnotta's acts were planned and deliberate.

The Crown contends that the accused was planning a murder up to six months in advance. Magnotta is charged with first-degree murder in Lin's slaying and dismemberment in May 2012.

West said he was following up on a tip sent to the desk

HANDOUT/THE CANADIAN PRESS

about Magnotta's whereabouts. He didn't know who Magnotta was, but a quick look provided "a plethora of Internet hits based on simple searches for his name," he testified.

The newspaper had written about an anonymous kitten killer one year earlier.

During the interview, Magnotta repeatedly denies having killed cats and posting videos online.

West said Magnotta appeared defensive but still sure of himself, even a bit cocky. No story was published based on the interview, West said.

Two days later, West and his employer received an email from a man they believed was Magnotta who suggested he was intending to kill a human and film the event in the near future.

The email, which was rife with spelling and grammatical mistakes, was written under the name John Kilbride, but referenced a meeting with West, leading the paper to believe Magnotta had authored it.

"Next time you hear from me it will be in a movie I am producing, that will have some humans in it, not just pussys. :)" the author writes near the end of the email, sent Dec. 10, 2011.

West testified that Kilbride was one of the victims of convicted serial killers Ian Brady and Myra Hindley, authors of the so-called Moors Murders in England in the mid-1960s.

He testified the paper alerted the police about the email.

"We believed this email to be from Mr. Magnotta," West said.

Magnotta, 32, has admitted the physical acts of which he's accused but has pleaded not guilty by way of mental disorder. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Authorities say runner will be held away from general prison population because of his high profile

Oscar Pistorius GETTY IMAGES

Oscar Pistorius was taken away in a police van with barred windows Tuesday to start serving a five-year prison sentence for killing girlfriend Reeva Steenkamp.

Delivering her sentence in the North Gauteng High Court in Pretoria, Judge Thokozile Masipa cited the "gross negligence" shown by the double-amputee Olympic runner when he shot Steenkamp multiple times through a toilet cubicle door in his home.

Pistorius, who cried and retched during his murder trial, was unemotional as he stood to hear his sentence. His prison term begins immediately; police led him down a flight of stairs to holding cells, and he left the courthouse in the armoured vehicle.

The world-famous runner later arrived at the nearby Kgosi Mampuru II prison in the South African capital. That facility has had problems with violence and overcrowding and is where — during the years of apartheid — death row inmates were executed before capital punishment was outlawed with the advent of democracy.

Despite the prison's reported problems, authorities said Pistorius would be held away from the general prison population because of his disability and high profile — possibly in a hospital wing or a high-security section.

Pistorius could be released after 10 months to serve the remainder under house arrest, according to legal experts.

Masipa last month convicted Pistorius of culpable homicide, or negligent killing, but acquitted him of murder after he testified he mistook Steenkamp for a nighttime intruder.

Steenkamp's parents were in court to hear the sentence and the dead model's mother, June, said justice had been done. A close friend of Steenkamp, Gina Myers, said: "I really don't think any of us will heal anytime soon ... there will always be questions." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Failure to launch? Drones grounded due to bureaucracy

Red tape. The feds issue some guidelines as some have to wait several months for approval to use unmanned aircraft

The federal government has launched a public campaign to help an increasing number of Canadians fly drones safely, though documents show many would-be pilots are facing lengthy delays in getting permission to send the popular unmanned aircraft buzzing skyward.

Transport Minister Lisa Raitt kicked off the campaign Tuesday in Toronto, reminding operators of legal restrictions on drone use, such as keeping at least eight kilometres away from airports and not hovering above 90 metres.

"How I explain it to my kids is, it's heavy, it's going to be up high in the air — if it falls out of the air and hits somebody on the head it's actually dangerous. So safety really does matter, it's as simple as that," she told reporters at a downtown store while flanked by a pair of sleek white quadcopters.

The safety push — featuring a website guide and forthcoming online ad and social media blitz — also highlights that commercial operators and those flying aircraft with a take-off weight of more than 35 kilograms need a special certificate from Transport Canada before they get their rotors spinning. If they launch without one, they can be fined up to $25,000.

However, many certificate-seekers can't get their devices even an inch off the ground as they're at times forced to wait several months for approval and mail the regulator a thick bundle of supporting material, internal documents reveal.

Americans not lovin' it: McDonald's sales slow

McDonald's CEO Don Thompson said Tuesday the company hasn't been keeping up with the times and that changes are in store for its U.S. restaurants.

Starting in January, Thompson said McDonald's will "simplify" its menu to make room for restaurants to offer options that are best-suited for their regions. To offer greater customization, he also said the company planned to expand its "Create Your Taste" offering that lets people pick the buns and toppings they want on burgers by tapping a touchscreen. The program is currently being offered in Southern California.

"We haven't been changing at the same rate as our customers' eating-out expectations," Thompson conceded during a conference call outlining the changes.

The remarks came after McDonald's said its profit sank 30 per cent in the third quarter, with sales at established locations down 3.3 per cent globally and in its flagship U.S. market. In the division encompassing Asia, where a major McDonald's supplier was shown on TV repackaging expired beef, the figure sank 9.9 per cent.

PERSONAL & COLLECTIVE MYTHS & COLD SEASON

The month of October, especially in Canada, should—should—be a sacred time to enjoy too-sweet autumn-themed lattes, molting piles of leaves, and the last warm-ish days before the slow, cold months-long winter marathon to come. Also, candy.

That, though, is but a Halloween-dream, considering the annual round of news coverage and commentary about flu season and flu shots and flu prevention that seems to have totally replaced the scary warnings about candy wrapped up with razor blades that I remember from my youth. (Still scary!) Were we ever so innocent, so pre-24/7-news cycle? This year, of course, Ebola has mostly replaced flu news. What I know about Ebola is exactly nothing, other than I'm very but very abstractly terrified of it. What I do know, however, about colds and flu and germs and hand-sani-based preventative techniques is everything. Or, at least I think I do, which is its own kind of semi-practical defence against, well, every uncontrollable thing. Usually, I like the idea of "live and let live," but this gets crushed during flu season, when my serious fears about getting sick ("I'm freelance! I can't get sick!") overtake my, or any, reality.

I spend a lot of time in libraries, among people and their apparently casual relationship to germs. Regularly, I hear them snurfling (what I call the truly disgusting inhalation of whatever is brewing in their noses, like snorting, but worse). I offer them Kleenex sometimes; they rarely take it. I'm not excited to listen to or watch someone blow their nose (other than my littlest nephew, because that is actually adorable), but I'd take it over that sick, swift snort that so many people use as an alternative.

I wonder if the smart-seeming campaigns to limit germs by encouraging people to cough into their arms have led to this idea, that blowing one's nose is worse than ... not. Maybe? Is it better for those germs to be shot into a tissue to spare me the snurfling-sound? I wonder, then, if my ideas about how to properly manage a nose are just my own assumptions, my own mythos, much like how I once heard that pop can cure a cold, and so I wield an icy bottle like a talisman when I get that throat-itch.

This is just the kind of stuff we make up, individually and collectively, myth or not, because in the face of everything that can go wrong all we can really do is manage the endless ideas about what is probably safe, and what might not be.

By virtue of being based in Toronto, Gates Wildlife Control finds itself dealing with a lot of raccoons ... like, an awful lot. The catch-and-release method is pretty simple when Gates is dealing with a nuisance adult raccoon. But what about when a baby critter gets separated from its mother? Well, that's a more delicate task — and Gates has designed a custom solution. (YouTube/Gates Wildlife Control) @ShawnaLewk: Yes. Sexualization of girls starts young & costumes like these help set tone for how girls see themselves.

Spies known by gadgets they keep

Movies. Colin Firth wields a bulletproof umbrella in Kingsman, a superspy story built on the 007 tradition of glamorous gizmos

IN FOCUS
Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

In the new film Kingsman: The Secret Service, Colin Firth plays a veteran of an independent international intelligence agency.

"The Kingsmen agents," he says, "are the new knights." He recruits a rookie (Taron Egerton) into the agency's training program — "the most dangerous job interview in the world" — just as twisted madman Valentine (Samuel L. Jackson), launches a plan to bring down the Kingsmen and cause world chaos.

Echoes of James Bond hang heavy over the story. There are suave spies, a warped villain in the vein of Dr. Julius No or Ernst Blofeld, an evil henchman, or in this case henchlady, named Gazelle (Sofia Boutella) who has knives where other people have feet. Above all, it has gadgets. Firth and his fellow agents — Michael Caine and Mark Strong — have umbrellas that deflect bullets and Zippo lighter hand grenades among other thingamajigs that no spy should leave home without.

Ever since 007 was kitted out with an attaché briefcase equipped with a folding sniper rifle, ammunition, a knife and 50 gold sovereigns in From Russia With Love, gadgets have become de rigueur in spy stories.

From jetpacks to a mobile phone with a stun gun and fingerprint scanner, Bond always had the coolest contraptions. His most famous gadget, the Aston Martin DB5, was introduced 22 minutes into Goldfinger. Bond's big rig came fortified with machine guns, ejector seats, a back shield, oil slick, rotating licence plates and tire slicers.

The car has appeared in six movies with later models featuring upgrades like a rear facing water canon, a jetpack stowed in the trunk and a cloaking shield.

Bond's awesome auto has inspired many other souped-up spy-mobiles, including the Pontiac GTO from xXx. Xander Cage's (Vin Diesel) car came with stinger missiles, parachutes, a flame-thrower and exploding hubcaps.

007 and xXx have sweet rides, but the Our Man Flint spy parody had the wildest stuff. Derek Flint's (James Coburn) watch not only told time but doubled as a microscope and his lighter had "82 different functions," he said, "83 if you want to light a cigar."

Killer heels and a va-va-boom lipstick

Whether it's I Spy's contact-lens video camera or the Swiss Army knife flamethrower-blowgun combo from the Get Smart movie, it seems the good guys get all the good gadgets, but super-villains also have some super-gizmos.

- From Russia With Love's Rosa Klebb (Lotte Lenya) did people in with a poison-tipped dagger blade embedded in the tip of her shoe.
- Helga Brandt (Karin Dor) of You Only Live Twice, meanwhile, tried to blow Bond to smithereens with a deadly lipstick bomb.

Comedy's the thing to master: Bridges

TV. Star of The Millers and Masters of Sex says sitcom roles are tougher than drama

Beau Bridges can currently be seen on TV as a closeted gay academic in drama Masters of Sex and a doofus dad in sitcom The Millers.

So which role does he find more difficult?

"I think making people laugh is probably one of the most difficult things to pull off. Comedy is tough. I think it's even harder than drama," he said in a summer interview.

The Millers returns for a second season Thursday on CTV. Bridges plays Tom, the bumbling father of local news reporter Nathan Miller (Will Arnett).

When Nathan announces he's getting divorced, Tom and his wife Carol (Margo Martindale) decide to split up, too.

The light half-hour comedy from showrunner Greg Garcia (My Name is Earl) sees Carol move in with her son and Tom impose himself on their daughter Debbie (Jayma Mays) and her family. While the kids try to cope with their infuriating parents, Tom and Carol venture into the dating world after 43 years of marriage.

He said he found The Millers challenging at first because he didn't have much experience filming a multi-camera sitcom in front of a studio audience. But he quickly embraced the live experience.

"The great thing about it is you get the immediate comeback to see how you're doing," he said. "What's difficult is putting on a new play every week and always changing things up all the time. You rehearse it for the writers every day, they come in with new stuff the next day, then even when we're performing it, if a joke doesn't work, they'll write another one and slip it to you right there on the spot."

"That made me real nervous in the beginning, but I found out quickly that the audience enjoys it more when you're making a mistake. They laugh and that helps me kind of relax and say, 'Oh, OK, I get it. So I don't have to worry about that.'

In Showtime's Masters of Sex, about pioneering sexuality researchers William Masters and Virginia Johnson, Bridges plays Provost Barton Scully, who is gay but has been in a decades-long marriage to Margaret (Allison Janney).

"Allison Janney, who plays my wife in Masters of Sex, she and Margo Martindale are friends. They know each other. So you know they're probably talking about me all the time behind my back," he said. "But Allison is great as well. Our scenes are very dramatic, very different from what I have with Margo, which is all hysterically funny."

When it comes to switching back and forth between a comedy and a drama, Bridges said he relies on the script.

"I've always felt that the most important element in any show is the script itself. Like Shakespeare said a long time ago, the play's the thing. I think that's still true. And in those instances, The Millers and Masters of Sex, they're, I think, beautifully written, both of them, for what they are," he said.

Catchy Little Apple is China's earworm

Music. Surreal video hits 50 million views, spawns tributes and parodies, and song is even adopted as recruiting tool by Chinese army

Has China found its own Gangnam Style? From Beijing parks to Shanghai skyscrapers and in Guangzhou factories to karaoke rooms in Macau, people are singing Little Apple — a song apparently so catchy it has even won over the army and police.

Calling themselves the Chopsticks Brothers, Xiao Yang and Wang Taili are neither brothers nor composers, but are responsible for a hit that has become a nationwide phenomenon.

Xiao Pingguo (Little Apple) was originally intended to promote their latest film when it was released in July, but has proven to be an earworm — the kind of song so insistent it gets stuck in the brain.

"This song is easy to follow, the pace is basic and repetitive. Even the old ladies in public gardens are learning it quickly," said Zeng Qiumei, a marketing manager from Sichuan province.

The accompanying music video has notched up more than 50 million views on Chinese video sites such as Sohu, iQiyi and Youku.

The surreal six-minute clip begins with a botched plastic surgery operation before cutting to Xiao and Wang naked in the Garden of Eden.

They then appear in a number of sequences, including dressed as mermaids on a beach or acting as village children.

The lyrics are largely nonsense, with the chorus running, "You're my little apple, you're my little apple."

Even so, and perhaps aided by relaxed attitudes towards intellectual property in China, the tune has become ubiquitous — playing on smartphone ringtones and in shopping malls, nightclubs and gyms.

The People's Liberation Army in the city of Xian has used the song in a recruitment video, while police in Shandong last month modified the lyrics for a broadcast warning about phone-banking scams.

"We changed the words to make people aware," a police officer said in comments broadcast on CCTV.

And a clip showing soldiers dancing to Xiao Pingguo with child survivors of an August earthquake that killed 600 people in the southwest became an online sensation.

There are countless other amateur videos of groups of people dancing to the song, including flight attendants, cheerleaders, firefighters and students.

One parody brings together North Korean leader Kim Jong-Un, Barack Obama, Vladimir Putin, Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and Secretary General of the UN Ban Ki-moon.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

Hollywood women Garner wrong kind of attention

NED EHRBAR
Metro in Hollywood

Emma Watson's influence must be rubbing off. Jennifer Garner was honoured at Elle magazine's Women in Hollywood benefit earlier this week, and she used the name of the event as a jumping off point for a pretty awesome speech about sexism in Hollywood. Here it is:

"The fact that there even needs to be a Women in Hollywood event is a little bit sad. I mean, the Men in Hollywood event is every day — it's called Hollywood.

Fifty-one per cent of the population should not have to schedule a special event to celebrate the fact that in an art that tells the story of what it means to be human and alive, we get to play a part.

"So for example, my husband and I do kind of the same job, a little bit. Not long ago we both had one of those magical days, we call it a junket, where we both attended these lovely events where people come in every four minutes, they ask the same questions over and over again, you know the drill. We got home at night and we compared notes. And I told him every single person who interviewed me, I mean every single one — and this is true of the red carpet here tonight, Elle — asked me, 'How do you balance work and family?' and he said the only thing that people asked him repeatedly was about the tits on the Blurred Lines girl, which, for the record if we're talking about them, they are real and they are fabulous ... As for work-life balance, he said no one asked him about it that day. As a matter of fact, no one had ever asked him about it. And we do share the same family. Isn't it time to kind of change that conversation?"

All valid points, and cleverly made. I'm all for asking Affleck about how he juggles it all the next time I interview him. But does that mean I have to ask Garner about Emily Ratajkowski's rack, too?

Rivers still making waves from beyond the grave

Joan Rivers

Apparently Joan Rivers left some instructions that her executors are finding a little tough to follow through on. "Joan requested that after she is gone that her personal diaries be turned into a book," a source tells Radar Online. "The problem is that they are having a real hard time shopping it around because of how over-the-top and defamatory it is." Sounds about right for Rivers. So, how defamatory are we really talking here? "Joan bashes celebrities and politicians in first-hand accounts throughout her life. Among her biggest revelations is that President Barack Obama is gay, which is something that she had joked about while she was alive." Oh. Oh, I see.

This is how you do Happy Birthday when you wanna impress Katy

Katy Perry is turning 30 this Saturday, and her friends are pulling out all the stops. Over the weekend, she made one of her birthday wishes known — and it's kind of adorably hokey. "All I want for my birthday is my name on the Shakey's Pizza marquee on Santa Monica Blvd. Please," she tweeted. Well, Katy, ask and ye shall receive. Sort of. In no time, the message "Happy birthday Katy Perry from Sophia" (from pal and Hello Giggles co-founder Sophia Rossi) popped up on a Shakey's. Only it was the Shakey's on Olympic, not Santa Monica. But Perry's not being picky about that bit and is still apparently thrilled, calling the mention "a bucket list dream come true." Some people are just really easy to shop for.

Justin visits the Vatican in true Belieber style

After a year of very grown-up trouble, it's nice to see Justin Bieber getting back to the kind of juvenile shenanigans that made him such a lovable scamp to begin with. Pop's reigning tiny tyrant took a trip to the Vatican recently, where he was scolded by staff during a tour for kicking a soccer ball around the halls. Oh, that Bieber. Always getting up to something! Justin, you know you're not supposed to play ball inside the house of the Lord. It's also worth noting that the Vatican usually enforces a strict dress code for visitors to its museums, a dress code that bars shorts and hats. No word on whether Bieber got scolded for that as well, though.

The most haunted places in Canada

When it comes to getting scared, Canada has an abundance of eerie historical locales that draw thousands of sightseers seeking the spirit world. With the aid of a few haunted tour guides, here's a look at highlights of the most paranormal places in Canada.

Salmagundi West, Vancouver

History: A cluttered, quaint antique shop, this flatiron building dates back to the 19th Century. A local medium has reportedly seen a spirit — presumed to be the ghost of a former owner's husband — walking through the store after-hours.

Eyewitness account: "The owner Anne has told me of strange cold spots in the store — even on hot days," said Will Woods of Forbidden Vancouver Tours. "I've experienced this once myself..."

Ottawa Jail Hostel

History: Now a traveller's hostel, this was Ottawa's central jail for over a century and the infamous site of the 1869 public hanging of Patrick Whelan for the assassination of politician Thomas D'arcy McGee.

Eyewitness account: "People have reported that they've woken up in the middle of the night to somebody standing at the foot of their bed reading what appears to be a Bible," said Stephanie Robinson of Ottawa Haunted Walk. "The man often matches the description of Patrick Whelan."

COURTESY: OTTAWA JAIL HOSTEL

Princess Theatre, Edmonton

History: Constructed in 1915, this three-storey movie house accommodates the apparition of a jilted bride, who hovers above the projection room. It's said the sound of her unborn baby cries loud enough to disrupt movies.

Eyewitness account: "The Princess Theatre never shied away from the fact that they have a ghost," admitted Nadine Bailey of Edmonton Ghost Tours. "I get two or three emails a month from people that work there telling me their own personal stories."

COURTESY: EDMONTON GHOST TOURS

St. Boniface Museum, Winnipeg

History: The first hospital to open in Western Canada during the mid-1800s, this museum has experienced such paranormal sightings as phantom nuns, priests and patients parading its hallways.

Eyewitness account: "We've had objects move; I've had people faint," said Kristen Verin-Treusch of Muddy Waters Tours. "We've smelled certain things and I've gotten to know the ghosts well enough that I can connect which smell goes with which ghost now."

JAMAICA HOME OF ALL RIGHT

The makings of a masterful mogul: Are you built to be a business owner?

Career. Do you possess the qualities that can take an entrepreneur to the next level?

LAUREN
TalentEgg.ca

Entrepreneurship calls for a range of abilities that don't always come naturally.

That's one reason some people find the prospect of starting their own business intimidating. It's also why many of those who pursue that path find themselves struggling to succeed.

It's important to remember that launching a startup is not just a career choice — it's a life choice. So how do you know whether you are cut out to be an entrepreneur before making the leap?

So when do I sleep?

You'll need to be ready to work long hours, often juggling multiple projects, particularly during high-growth periods or periods of high demand.

Passion

All great entrepreneurs are passionate: They live, breathe and eat their business idea.

Being passionate about your business will drive your success. If you aren't committed to what you are selling or doing, how do you expect anyone else to be?

Success in any career path usually calls for commitment, but entrepreneurship means taking it to the next level. You'll need to be ready to give 110 per cent — and maybe re-evaluate what that means.

Open-mindedness

A top asset in life and work, open-mindedness is a must-have in a new entrepreneur's toolbox. In order to grow any business into a successful one, you are going to have to be open to critiques from your customers, other entrepreneurs and mentors. These people can offer the most valuable advice and lessons that can move your business forward.

Open-mindedness can also help you implement changes or fine tune things without getting bogged down by your own preferences, helping you focus on what is most likely to drive success.

Closed-minded entrepreneurs will struggle to improve and may not find room

Self-starter

Entrepreneurs cannot just sit back and wait for success to find them.

- The most important stage of the entrepreneurship process (getting things off the ground) will test your self-starting ability to the max, but you'll also need to deploy this skill throughout your career as an entrepreneur.
- You must be a self-starter in order to achieve long-term success. Self-starters don't depend on others needlessly. They know that in order to succeed, they will have to make and reach their goals on their own.
- Entrepreneurship takes determination and commitment, and someone who doesn't have the drive to accomplish that on their own may not be the best candidate for starting their own business.

Leadership

Don't think of an entrepreneur as a lone wolf. As your operations grow, you'll need to lead a team and connect them with your passion for the business — a challenge that demands the ability to build rapport and keep everyone focused on specific goals.

Leadership also calls for accountability.

As you set expectations and goals for your team, you'll have to be ready to show that you hold yourself accountable for overall success and accept your position as a key motivator.

Being a leader will not only benefit your staff in the long run; the confidence and competence that a leader possesses will be beneficial in all aspects of your business.

Move aside, traditional pie crust

Fennel Scrunch Meat Pie. This dish uses phyllo crust to offer a delicate topping that enhances the flavours contained underneath

DINNER EXPRESS
Emily Richards
food@metronews.ca

During the fall entertaining season, if you have a smaller family, you may want a smaller amount of protein to serve to your guests.

This meat pie offers up that option while including everyone's favourite Greek influences in the flavours. It is also a great weeknight dinner choice for your family.

Most traditional meat pies have a pastry crust but this version has a light, crisp phyllo crust that is uniquely shaped by scrunching up the phyllo to put it on top of the pie. Its delicate texture enhances the tasty meat filling.

You can do this for fruit pies as well, as long as the filling is cooked inside.

If you want to make this dinner pie ahead of time, simply make the filling and place it in the pie plate.

When you are ready to finish it off, take it out of the refrigerator and top it with the phyllo to bake.

You can also try making mini versions of this dish in small ramekins and cut the phyllo sheets in half to top them.

This creamy and delicious dinner pie will surprise everyone at the table.

1. In a large nonstick skillet heat the extra virgin oil over medium high heat. Add fennel, green onions, garlic and fennel seeds, season with salt and pepper then cook for about 5 minutes or until they are softened.

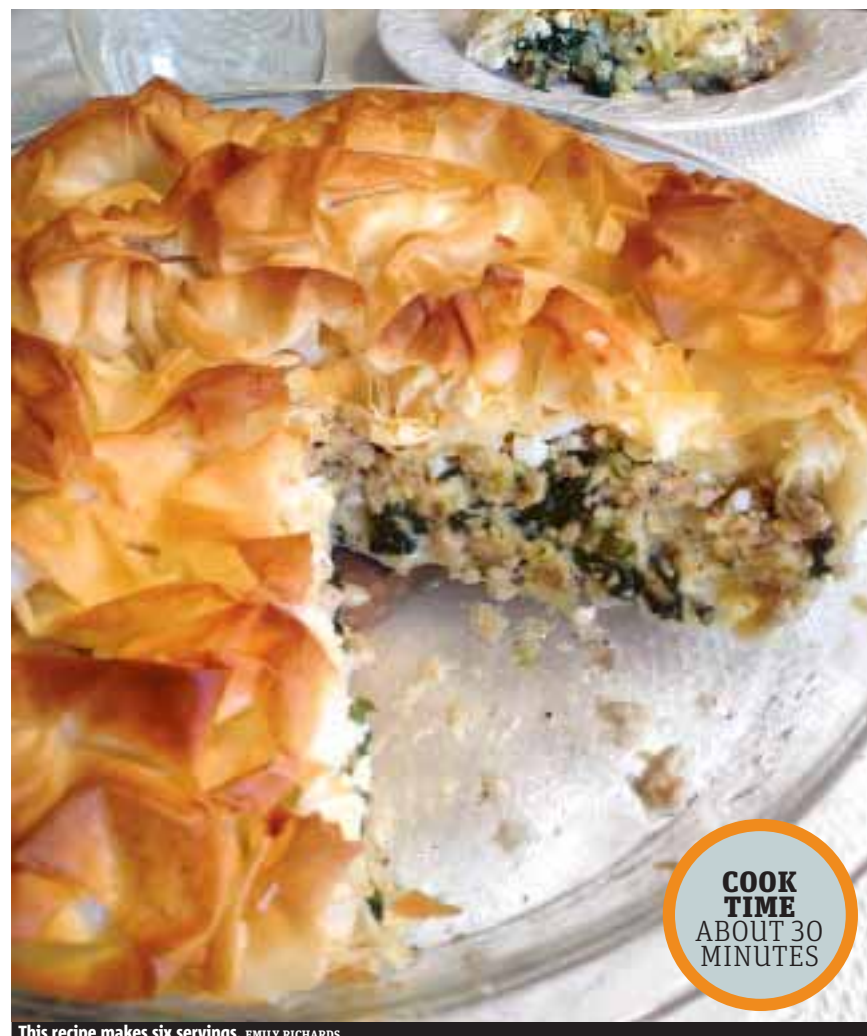

2. Add the ground turkey, chicken or veal and cook, breaking up meat for about 8 minutes or until no longer pink. Add the baby spinach and cook for 3 minutes or until it is wilted.

3. Add the whipping cream and bring to a boil, simmer stirring occasionally for about 5 minutes or until most of the cream is absorbed. Stir in the seasoned bread crumbs until the mixture is well combined. Scrape everything into a 10-inch (25 cm) pie plate. Sprinkle with the crumbled feta cheese.

4. Lay 1 sheet of phyllo out on a work surface and brush it with butter. Gently crumple it up and place on top of pie, starting at one edge. Repeat with remaining phyllo sheets to cover the top of the pie.

5. Bake the Fennel Scrunch Meat Pie in a 425 F oven for about 12 minutes or until phyllo is golden brown and filling is bubbly. Serve it with a Greek salad to complete this Greek-inspired dish.

ABOUT 30 MINUTES

This recipe makes six servings. EMILY RICHARDS

- 1 tsp (5 ml) fennel seeds, crushed

- 1 lb (454 g) lean ground turkey, chicken or veal

4. Spread thin layer of cheese mix over bottom of pie shell.

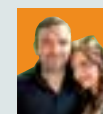

Top mix with half of onion slices, then half of tomato slices, followed by remaining onions, then remaining tomatoes. Spread the rest of the cheese mixture over the tomatoes. Bake until browned and bubbly, 40 to 45 minutes.

Meat, a contented carnivorous writer, documents his and his vegan fiancée Veg's dietary journey as they travel and munch their way across four continents.

Veg: Buenos Aires appears to be in the midst of a vegetarian revolution, despite the country's rep as steak capital of the world. The city had the meatless restaurant numbers to back this up. We opted to eat in most nights, however, and Veg enjoyed this breaded soy patty atop a warm mushroom and onion salad with boiled baked potato wedges.

Meat: The local butcher was on my radar when we arrived in one of my all-time favourite capital cities. I was after the pricey filet mignon known locally as bife de lomo. Once acquired, I pan-fried it medium rare and served it with green squash, mushrooms and baked potato wedges. As expected, the soft, succulent Argentinian meat stole the show.

Willy returns for final playoff push Alive but barely.

Losers of their last seven games, Bombers need to win and get some help to advance to post-season

With their season hanging by a thread, the Winnipeg Blue Bombers can at least look forward to the return of their regular starting quarterback on Saturday.

Drew Willy looked good in practice Tuesday after missing last week's game due to injuries.

"More than that, I liked what he said," coach Mike O'Shea said after practice. "He said he'll be fine."

The Blue Bombers (6-10) will try to end a seven-game losing skid on Saturday against the B.C. Lions (8-7). Winnipeg will be eliminated from playoff contention with another defeat as the Lions are four points ahead in the race for the crossover spot in the CFL West.

Even if Winnipeg wins, the Blue Bombers would need a lot of help for a playoff spot to be possible. They would also need to beat the CFL-leading Calgary Stampeders and hope for a combination of B.C. and Toronto losses.

The Lions would need to lose their final two and the Argonauts (6-9) would have to lose two of their final three.

But first, the Bombers have

"We know we've got a good B.C. team coming in here," Willy said after practice Tuesday. "Their defence has been playing really well lately. They're not giving up touchdowns."

And the Bombers haven't been scoring them.

"We've got to work extremely hard this week in the red zone to be efficient," he said. "We've been struggling in the red zone for sure at this part of the season so we've got to make sure we're executing at all phases."

Willy's most nagging injury has been to his throwing hand.

His personal numbers have looked good and he led the team to a great start before their victory drought. Willy has battled with Toronto veteran Ricky Ray for the lead in passing yards for much of the season. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cornish rushes his way to two weekly honours

Calgary running back Jon Cornish was named CFL offensive player of the week and top Canadian after his stellar performance in the Stampeders' 33-23 victory over the Winnipeg Blue Bombers last week.

Cornish, from New Westminster, B.C., had 21 carries for 160 rushing yards and scored on a nine-yard touchdown run late in the fourth quarter to help seal the victory. He also had a 12-yard reception.

Edmonton linebacker Dexter McCoil was named defensive player of the week, while teammate Kendial Lawrence took the special-teams honour.

The Edmonton Oilers returned to practice Tuesday minus the 300-pound gorilla on their backs.

The Oilers won their first game of the season Monday, ending a spectacular face-plant out of the starting gate that had left a fragile fan base teetering on the abyss of despairing déjà vu.

No more fun and games for Peyton Manning.

OK, it was "hat day" for the Denver Broncos, who didn't don helmets or pads at practice Tuesday. Still, the new record-holder for most career touchdown passes made it clear he has put his historic Sunday night performance against San Francisco behind him.

That's because Philip Rivers and the San Diego Chargers (5-2) are making another Thursday night visit to Sports Authority Field.

Relentless Bayern causes Roma to fall

Shades of Brazil.

Munich has scored 13 goals in last two games after laying 7-1 beatdown on AS Roma

Arjen Robben scored twice as Bayern Munich routed Roma 7-1 on Tuesday for a club-record away win in the Champions League, showing the German club is once again among the favourites to take the title.

Having taken target practice in a 6-0 rout of Werder Bremen at the weekend, it was more of the same from Bayern early on at the Stadio Olimpico with five goals in the first half.

Robben put the 2013 champion ahead nine minutes in with an expertly curled shot from a tough angle, before Germany's World Cup hero Mario Goetze doubled the lead in the 23rd and Robert Lewandowski made it 3-0 in the 25th.

- Transmissions. Six-speed manual or automatic
- Base price. $19,495 base, $28,795 as-tested

Market position

Although it shares platforms and engineering with parent company Hyundai, Kia is becoming more of a performance brand, adding turbo power to some of its models, along with new styling under the direction of former Audi designer Peter Schreyer.

Points

- The Forte has three configurations: the four-door Forte sedan, the Forte5 hatchback, and the two-door Forte Koup.
- You get a lot of features in the SX model, but there's a lot of hard plastic, so it doesn't always look as high-end as you'd expect.
- Kia's warranty covers almost everything for five years or 100,000 km.

The car has tons of cargo space, plus cubbies under the floor.

Interesting features

Heated front seats, wiper de-icer, cruise control, and Bluetooth on all models; available navigation, backup camera, heated rear seats, HID headlights, leather seats, and heated steering wheel.

JIL

Although Kia initially entered the Canadian market by focusing almost exclusively on price, it now has added performance and styling to the list, even on its compact Forte models.

Redesigned in 2014, the Forte5 hatchback now includes a turbocharged 1.6-litre four-cylinder engine in its top SX trim line, the model I tested. The base engine is a 2.0-litre four-cylinder that makes 173 horsepower, while the turbo model spins out 201 horses.

You can get both engines with a six-speed manual transmission, but mine was a six-speed automatic.

Pricing for the 2015 models starts at $19,495 for the LX+, while the SX starts at $24,195 and rises to $28,795 for the fully loaded package.

The Forte5 has morphed from a relatively plain car into a sharp-looking model, with its tiger-shark grille, flared wheel arches and up-swept body lines.

Inside, the redesigned interior features an upgraded instrument cluster, a new steering wheel, and numerous cubbies for small-item storage, including a covered bin where you can plug in and hide your electronics.

The interior features an upgraded instrument cluster and numerous cubbies.

Heated front seats are standard on all models, and the SX Luxury adds heated rear seats and a driver's seat that's also cooled. Unfortunately, the front-seat passenger doesn't get one as well.

The rear seats fold flat for extra cargo space, and there are more hidden storage bins under the cargo floor.

The turbo Forte5 is fast and fun to pilot, but it feels more like a daily driver that's quick on its feet, rather than a harsh sports model that could get tiring after a while.

The suspension is sport-tuned but still comfortable, although I'd like to get a little more steering feel from the wheel.

It runs on regular-grade gasoline, and I averaged 8.7 L/100 km in my week with it.

Not everyone will need the turbo's power, so the 2.0-litre should be enough for many drivers, and at a lower price. Be sure to test drive both if the Forte5 is on your list.

James Bond's first sports car didn't exist

Autopilot. Bentley in Casino Royale had the wrong model year until author corrected his error in Moonraker

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

The first mention of James Bond driving any kind of car occurs in chapter five of Casino Royale, the first of Ian Fleming's 14 Bond novels.

"Bond's car was his only personal hobby. One of the last of the 4-1/2-litre Bentleys with the super-charger by Amherst Villiers, he had bought it almost new in 1933 and had kept it in careful storage through the war. It was still serviced every year and, in London, a former Bentley mechanic, who worked in a garage near Bond's Chelsea flat, tended it with jealous care. Bond drove it well and with an almost sensual pleasure. It was a battleship-grey convertible coupe, which really did convert, and was capable of touring at ninety, with thirty miles an hour in reserve."

"Ninety, with 30 miles an hour in reserve" is such a swell way to say the car tops out at 120 mph. The next time I get pulled over by a cop and he asks me how fast I was going, I'm going to say, "I had 57 kilometres per hour in reserve ... You figure it out."

But I guess the most intriguing thing about Bond driving a 1933-ish 4-1/2-litre Bentley is that the English automaker never made a 4-1/2-litre Bentley model after 1931.

Fleming continued the historical inaccuracy in the next novel, Live and Let Live, where he specifically refers to the car as a 1933 model.

But to his credit, he corrected the error in the next novel, Moonraker.

where Bond's ride suddenly became a 1930 4-1/2-litre Bentley. And to tidy things up even a bit further, Fleming did the sensible thing during that novel, and had the Bentley destroyed during a car chase sequence, so it could never be heard from again.

For the record, I think that's an area where film is so superior to literature as an art form. Whenever car chases and car crashes need to be conveyed, film always does that better, hands down.

The 4-1/2-litre Bentley is an iconic automobile, famous for its pre-war racing successes at Brooklands and Le Mans at the hands of England's famous Bentley Boys.

"The supercharger by Amherst Villiers," which the narrator describes, makes Bond's car even more special. Such a supercharged model came to be known as the Blower Bentley. (Blower is kind of slang for supercharger.)

The most famous of the Bentley Boys, Henry Birken, wanted to supercharge the car to get more power for racing, but W.O. Bentley didn't. Although Bentley didn't own the company anymore, he was still its chief engineer, and wouldn't allow the engine to be modified to accept the supercharger.

He did, however, acquiesce to its placement in front of the radiator grille, which ultimately gave the Blower Bentley its unique and instantly recognizable front-end look.

Ultimately, the Blower Bentleys weren't as successful racers as their naturally aspirated brethren, mostly because they weren't as reliable.

But, obviously, any Bentley 4-1/2-litre is a very manly and high-end machine, and a perfect fit for Special Agent 007.

It's also a perfect way to launch the intriguing relationships Bond has always had with great sporting cars.

The 1927 to 1931 Bentley 4-1/2-litre was the first car attached to the Bond legend. The pictured model is in full race trim. BENTLEY
